Language Associations and Collaborative Support

LACS 2008-2011

- * Disseminated ECML projects through FIPLV networks
- * Mapped ways in which language teacher associations are organised
- * Identified effective dissemination methods
- * Produced a manual to support associations in evaluating and developing support for language teaching/learning

LACS 2012-2015

- * Mediates between ECML projects and language teacher associations and other regional and national networks
- * Raises awareness of existing projects and encourages language professionals to adapt them to their context
- * A directory of associations and other language associations
- * Case studies of how ECML projects are being implemented in different countries

Language associations and collaborative support

Language teacher associations across the globe share many of the same challenges. This collaboratively produced handbook contains practical ideas and case studies on issues such as how to recruit members, access funding and use technology for communication. It also features sections on organising different types of professional development activities, disseminating research, and influencing policy.

WHO IS IT FOR?

- Volunteers and professionals working with language teacher associations
- Language teachers and teacher trainers involved in innovation and collaboration

LACS MALTA 2013

An event organised by the Language Associations and Collaborative Support (LACS) project team in partnership with the European Centre for Modern Languages (ECML) is to take place on 5 September 2013 – National Curriculum Centre, Hamrun, Malta. You are welcome to join us.

THE PUBLICATION

The publication is aimed at those involved in the running of language teacher associations at international, national, regional and local levels. This may include paid employees or, more frequently, volunteers. It provides guidance on the effective running and networking of associations. view details

The European Centre for Modern Languages (ECML) is a Council of Europe institution promoting excellence in language education in its 34 member states. Publication downloads at <http://www.ecml.at/publications>.
